■ CHARITY: About $8,000 raised for Red Roof Retreat

Penguins enjoy milder dip

DON FRASER/POSTMEDIA NETWORK

About 30 brave swimmers took part in the 40th annual Penguin Dip in Niagara-on-the-Lake on Boxing Day afternoon. Money was raised at the event for Red Roof Retreat.

DON FRASER
Postmedia Network

Owen Bjorgan agreed the only thing more wrong than a Speedo is a dunk into the frigid waters of Lake Ontario.

Bjorgan, 23, was marking his fourth Penguin Dip in Niagara-on-the-Lake on Saturday. He was sporting a dark Speedo — and no other skin cover — as he and about 30 others waited in a heated trailer for the famous Penguin Club swim.

"The key to this is to remember it is supposed to be fun and for a good cause," he said.

"And everybody will get out alive and we'll all celebrate on the other side," Bjorgan added with a laugh. "So it's a bit of short-term pain and long-term gain for everybody else."

Now into its 40th year, the Penguin Dip also served as a fundraiser for Red Roof Retreat.

Red Roof is a local camp that provides respite and recreational programs for children, youths and young adults with special needs and their families in Niagara.

Money raised in advance reached almost $8,000 in pledges, and more was raised at the dip.

Rules require three wades into the water of Lake Ontario, a quick dip, another with splashing and silly stunts and a third, grueling slow walk backward.

Swimmers become club members by participating in three separate years.

Lifelong town resident Carol Dyck, 54, was among dozens to take in the spectacle of splashes and shrieks.

"Most of the people here are townies, and I just live down the street," said Dyck.

"It's about all of them getting together and it's a great event."

Afterward, volunteer Chris Bjorgan, Owen's uncle, remarked on the 6°C air temperature, much warmer than previous years.

"It's more fun when it's cold," he said, shivering nonetheless after his plunge.

"There's no real challenge here."

"There's two ways you can get your water here — cold and wet or cold and ice-hard," said Bjorgan.

"This was just cold and wet."

Be cautious when taking the icy plunge

FRANKI IHEMAN
Postmedia Network

Temperatures may be above the seasonal norm, but water temperatures are still cold.

It's something experts say to keep in mind this year's weather will make the waiting around and after a dip more pleasant than usual, people should still be aware of the cold body shock symptoms so they don't panic when they take the plunge.

"What happens for most people when they jump in, is you're going to end up having your heart rate go very high very rapidly and it's very difficult to control your breathing and you end up hyperventilating," Cheung said.

Though that might sound frightening, he added that it's generally a safe activity for most people.

"The big danger that can come from it is if you are not ready or not experience or not knowing that this can happen and you can start to panic," he said.

"For the vast majority of people I would say it's a safe and fun thing to do."

But there are exceptions. Cheung said that people with existing heart conditions, hypertension and high blood pressure especially should steer clear of the activity.

Cheung also said that the right location can decrease the possibility of incidental dangers.

"The venue I would really recommend against is if you're up at the edge and you decide to cut a hole in the ice and jump in that can be very dangerous," he said.

Cheung said that when your body starts to go into shock it can be very difficult to get yourself out of the water, especially if you are in a hole in the ice.

The safer bet is to go to organized polar bear dips.

The Penguin Club hosted its annual dip into the Niagara River in Niagara-on-the-Lake on Boxing Day.

The annual Crystal Beach Polar Bear Dip is Saturday, Jan. 9, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. with the big dip taking place at 1 p.m. at Bal Harbour Beach.

■ YEAR AHEAD

Big projects, big decisions for Pelham

WAYNE CAMPBELL
Special to Windsor Tribune

Preparations in 2015 will propel Pelham into 2016.

Mayor Dave Augustyn said the town wrapped up major road reconstruction in downtown Fenwick, along Port Robinson Road and on Regional Road 20. Meanwhile, the municipality planned for a community centre and new Fenwick library.

In 2015, we saw a groundbreaking in East Fonthill. That was the end of a long process and now the pipes are in the ground."

The project has been "a generation in the making," the mayor said.

Preparations for residential, commercial and institutional developments along Rice Road from Regional Road 20 south to the Welland boundary go back more than 20 years.

Augustyn in his first election campaign almost 10 years ago saw a contest over purchase of 12.5 hectares by the town at Rice Road and Regional Road 20.

"In 2016, roads will go in and walls will go up and parks will begin" in the northern section bordering Regional Road 20 and reaching to Port Robinson Road. The project is a partnership developing private and town-owned lands.

The town will extend a road from Pelham Town Square eastward into the new development. The new road will meet Wellingway Way off Regional Road 20 and continue to Rice Road.

It will include sidewalks and a multi-use trail for walkers and cyclists, as well as park areas and a central square.

The mayor said private developers, the David Allen Group, along Regional Road

20, and River Realty, on Port Robinson Road, will begin putting up commercial buildings and residential housing units.

Wellingway, a cancer treatment facility, will start its building on 0.8 hectares leased from the town.

Meanwhile, the town is working with the province to ensure a 10-doctor medical centre and retirement home project go ahead.

Augustyn said there have been delays on the medical projects because the province recently changed its requirements for health centres. It limits them to underserved areas. It did not consider Pelham one.

A major decision for town council in early 2016 will be how to fund a $37-million twin-icepad and multi-purpose community centre. It will start with a council budget meeting next Monday.

"We are lining things up to give council the information it needs to make a decision on how to get it going in August or the late fall,"

Augustyn said.

"There are still a lot of questions about funding, debt and those kinds of things."

An architectural design advisory committee working on the community centre whittled down the size and scope to reduce costs. It dropped a link with the YMCA. It also eliminated a fitness centre, which would compete with privately operated businesses.

The committee did keep a walking track but moved it from over a gym to the top of an arena.

The mayor said skaters and hockey teams welcomed the change. It will give them a way to warm up as well as a way to exercise to build endurance.

"We are continuing to work with the construction manager and architect to meet standards."

"We are also trying our darnedest to get funding. We will go anywhere to make our case."

That includes trips to Queen's Park to say provincial infrastructure funding should include community centres.

The town contends Pelham already upgraded its roads, water and sewer services, downtown areas and parks. It should not lose out now that provincial funding is turning to those services.

The town is also lobbying Ottawa to include community centres in infrastructure funding programs promised by the new Liberal government.

In a worst-case scenario, the Pelham would have to go it alone and look at what that would mean to local taxpayers, Augustyn said. It could mean fundraising projects for the community centre.

"We will have big discussions and big decisions to make in 2016."

In Fenwick, a smaller architectural design committee is working on a $1-million addition to the Maple Acre Library. The mayor said a redesign of a facade can enhance the historical 1919 building. The current design has stirred controversy.

■ EMPLOYMENT

Don't wait to apply for summer job funding program

ALLAN BENNER
Postmedia Network

There's a limited time to apply for a program that will help small businesses bring in some extra help this summer, while providing more summer jobs for students.

Niagara Centre MP Vance Badawey is urging local businesses to take advantage of the Canada Summer Jobs program as soon as possible.

"This is huge," Badawey said.

He said in addition to providing summer job opportunities for students from 15 to 30 years of age who are planning to return to their studies, the program "also gives businesses the opportunity to offset their bottom line by getting federal dollars."

The funding is for non-profit corporations, public-sector employers as well as small businesses with fewer than 50 employees.

Application deadline is Feb. 26, and funding will be available to successful applicants allowing them to hire students by May.

"It's imperative that the people who want to get involved in this program get those applications in now, because the deadline is coming up," Badawey said. "That's a critical program for people to know about both

YOUTH
UNEMPLOYMENT

Canada's youth unemployment rate is currently more than 13 per cent; for students returning to school, it's more than 16 per cent.

In comparison, the national unemployment rate for people 25 and older is about six per cent.

In the public sector, as well as the private sector."

The program provides non-profit organizations with up to 100 per cent of the costs of hiring students, while public-sector employers and small businesses can receive up to 50 per cent of the costs.

Additional funding may be provided for hiring students with disabilities of up to $3,000 per student, to pay for any special tools or adaptations required by the worker.

Two old faithfuls for year-end wraps

Writing end-of-the-year lists can be tricky.

Or at least repetitive. That's particularly so when news items from Niagara are being catalogued and ranked.

Because of the snail-like progress of many issues near and dear to the heart of local citizens, the same top 10 notable tidbits can keep popping up.

Here, for instance, is one I included in my end-of-the-year space-filler for 2014:

"Speaking of Niagara? Given the chorus of co-ordinated cooing for the chococho throughout the peninsula, I figured some sort of innocuous bone might be thrown our way this year. But no. Look for a commitment in 2015 with a far-off implementation date."

See what I mean?

If anything, the chorus grew even shriller

this year, with Niagara Falls Mayor Jim Diodati and Niagara Region Chairman Al Caslin in particular overdoing on misplaced optimism, thanks in large part to a Region-commissioned consultant's report that concluded — surprise! — extending daily rail service to Niagara was a grand and sensible idea.

Fortunately, you can't keep a good optimist down.

Caslin has stated he expects the province will announce sometime in the first three months of 2016 that daily GO train service is coming to these here parts.

Folks, that's never been in doubt. The question that has never been definitively answered, however, is when.

The closest thing to a worthwhile approximation from a credible, neutral source came six years ago when the province was conducting an environmental assessment into extending GO train service to Niagara.

At that time, an agency spokeswoman said she couldn't predict when commuter trains would run in Niagara if the assessment proved positive, but noted GO Transit's strategic plan had targeted such a service by 2020.

Keep that in mind if the province does make an announcement in the next few months about a 2020 — or later — start, and local politicians gush about how their lobbying paid off.

At any rate, my musings about GO from the 2014 end-of-the-year list can stand verbatim for this year's list, too. Just change the last sentence to: "Look for a commitment in 2016, with a far-off implementation date."

Speaking of repeat visits to end-of-the-year wrap-ups, I offer you Port Place.

This baby's been on annual top 10 lists since 2004.

Let's revisit the 2014 list's editorial comment about the moribund development.

"Port Dalhousie angst grows apace. What's this, about three years of nothingness in the core? During the election, (nearly elected mayor) Sendzik made nice with Port Place strongman Derek Martin, and suggested afterwards he thought there was a way out of this mess. Oh, there's a way out. Plenty of them, in fact. There just aren't any that will find agreement."

While progress on this file remained elusive in 2015, there was some corporate movement. Martin is out; Fortress Real Developments Inc. is in.

Fortress officials appear to be a more cheerful, accessible lot, and stressed the importance of moving forward in some "noticeable" manner by year's end.

Oops.

Oh well, there's always 2016.

Indeed, whether the news it makes is good, bad or indifferent, I think it's safe to expect Port Place to make next year's list.

Come to think of it, though, I really haven't done a list for this past year.

Don't worry, there's still time.

Shipwrecks — Carita

SKIP GILLHAM
 For Postmedia Network

The Swedish vessel Carita was wrecked after leaving the Great Lakes.

The 102.10-metre-long cargo ship had taken on a load of oats and pens at Thunder Bay and was headed for Port au Spain, on the West Indies island of Trinidad, when it suffered a mechanical breakdown on Dec. 18, 1975.

Two days later, Carita drifted ashore at Money Point, Cape Breton Island, and had to be abandoned by the crew. The relentless pounding of the waves on the stranded ship broke the hull into four pieces before any plan for salvage could be undertaken.

Carita had been built at Abo, Finland, in 1966 and first sailed as Ingrid Gorthon. It was sold and renamed Carita on Sept. 2, 1975, but had only a short career under this name. There are still visible remains of the ship resting at the location of it being wrecked 40 years ago this month.

■ NEW YEAR'S EVE: Hotel rooms in tourist district to be booked solid despite no concert broadcast

Niagara Falls 'place to be' even without live TV

RAY SPITERI

Postmedia Network

Hotel rooms will be booked solid on New Year's Eve even though the likes of Keith Urban or Demi Lovato won't be on stage in Queen Victoria Park, tourism officials say.

"New Year's Eve will still be one of the busiest nights of the year at Fallsview Casino and Casino Niagara," said Niagara Casinos spokesman Greg Medulun.

"Our hotel is fully booked and we expect about 75,000 people to come and go from the two casinos by the time midnight rolls around."

Niagara Falls Tourism chairman Wayne Thomson acknowledged rates are "always good for the operators" on New Year's Eve, but having a live televised show acts as an added incentive.

"New Year's Eve in Niagara Falls is the place to be."

Thomson also works for the Fallsview

Group, which operates a handful of hotels in the busy tourism district.

He said even though Global broadcast live from Niagara Falls for the past six years — and all-star calibre talent performed — many who packed Queen Victoria Park drove home after the show.

Thomson said many of the people who stayed at hotels right in the tourist area for the night were the ones who also enjoyed other forms of entertainment, which won't change this year.

He said the benefit of having live TV coverage across Canada on New Year's Eve wasn't necessarily for that night, but for future marketing as a tourist destination.

"Believe me, all the hotel rooms will be filled. It will be an extremely busy New Year's Eve as it always is. Everybody is planning for it."

Tom Cochran, former Styx singer Dennis DeYoung and former Great Big Sea singer Alan Doyle will all play the annual free concert in Queen Victoria Park. In mid-December, Sarah Vazquez, vice-president of business development and marketing with Canadian Niagara Hotels, said they were close to selling out their 2,400 rooms at six hotels in Niagara Falls.

"Niagara Falls is a first-class destination and is top of mind for so many people, especially on New Year's Eve."

Vazquez said Canadian Niagara Hotels is not seeing a decline in rates because this year's concert won't be on live television.

"It's trending as it should be," she said referring to the rates.

"And there's so much more than Niagara Falls offers, too. You have other entertainment, the casino, great dining and great hotels."

Medulun said it's "no secret" New Year's Eve in Niagara Falls has established itself during the years as "iconic and a must-do experience" for locals and tourists.

"Local tourism stakeholders, including the casino, the Parks and the city, have invested significant dollars into the event this year, and while it will not be televised, the free live concert still promises to be a hot spot for fun and a great place to ring in the new year."

Mayor Jim Diodati said even with no live televised broadcast, the city still has the great attraction that is the falls itself. That keeps the Honeymoon Capital at the top of the bucket list for many people around the world.

And he said while hotel rooms right around the falls may be booked solid, visitors will still be able to find rooms in the city.

"The Fallsview area is always the first to go, but there will be lots of rooms available," said Diodati.

"We have a significant amount of bed and breakfasts, and we'll have great transportation, even after midnight, to get people around."

Niagara Falls hotels are still expected to be booked solid, even though there won't be a live television broadcast of this year's New Year's Eve concert at Queen Victoria Park.

■ BOXING DAY: Seaway Mall sees steady stream of shoppers

Bargain hunting in season

FRANKI IKEMAN
Postmedia Network

There were no massive lines or fights for coveted parking spots at Seaway Mall Saturday.

The Boxing Day frenzy didn't seem to hit the Welland shopping centre with the force neighbouring Niagara municipalities felt, but the stream was fairly steady throughout the day.

A flow of shoppers, rather than hordes of holiday debt hunters, may not have been exciting for some retailers, but for the Welland and District Humane Society it meant a steady stream of people through the doors at the Cat Adoption Centre.

As of mid-day, one black cat had found its forever home and five were left.

Volunteer Mike Kucman said even one adoption in a day is a good day, adding some days no cats are adopted.

"It's nice seeing cats get out the door," he said.

Kucman said that two weeks ago, the shelter had 30 cats in, but that the centre has been having "good week after good week."

And although some people were getting some belated holiday shopping in Saturday, Kucman said that's not what they're looking for in homes for cats.

"We don't want to adopt cats out as gifts, because then they might come back," he said.

Kucman said he hopes to see the remaining five cats find their forever homes soon, saying he hopes people won't shy away from older and black cats.

One retailer doing well with the steady foot traffic was Vince's European Deli, where Norm Gauthier was working at the deli's stand.

He said Boxing Day was "not bad" but before Christmas was much busier.

"We had little spurts where it got a little busy but then it would be back to normal," Gauthier said.

The Niagara Falls-based company has been setting up shop for the holiday season at Seaway Mall for five years. Normally, they pack up and leave after New Year's, but because business has been so good they are staying until March.

"This year my boss said we're staying until March. We're very popular here at the mall," he said.

After closing on Christmas Day, malls and stores reopened to a sea of customers Saturday morning.

In Niagara Falls, parking was hard to come by at the outlet mall on Lundy's Lane early Saturday afternoon.

Parking lots at Niagara Square and the Walmart plaza at Niagara Falls were packed with vehicles, however, open spots could be found.

"This is the second mall we came to," said Niagara Falls resident Lisa Hawken, moments after finding a parking spot at Canada One Factory Outlets. "The first one (Outlet Collection at Niagara in Niagara-on-the-Lake), we couldn't even get a spot. It's crazy."

Hal Hamilton stayed outside while his wife was inside looking for Boxing Day bargains.

"I'm just out for the walk," said Hamilton, who was born and raised in Niagara Falls, but who now lives in Ottawa.

"We're here visiting family and we just wanted to go for a walk. This was one place we went. I don't go into the stores or anything."

Elsewhere in the region, the parking lot at the Pen Centre in St. Catharines was flush with vehicles, however, sections of open spots were visible. That mall's "Boxing Week Sale" started on Saturday, with up to 75 per cent off at select stores and merchandise.

In north St. Catharines, Costco and Fairview Mall parking lots and ring roads were steady, but flowing well by late morning Saturday.

Carly Rupic, a spokeswoman for Outlet Collection at Niagara owner Ivanhoe Cambridge, said bigger Boxing Day crowds are expected to be bigger at that complex in Niagara-on-the-Lake than last year.

"This [judging by the huge increase we saw in Black Friday traffic and the strong holiday season we have had so far], said Rupic.

"The beautiful weather has also been a great help to us and hopefully it will hold up for Boxing Day to bring in even more shoppers."

Jen Cherry, general manager of Best Buy on Vansickle Road in St. Catharines, was preparing for the shopping sale frenzy by 4 a.m.

As per usual, some shoppers started lining up outside the store after midnight, with prospective shoppers showing up by 6 a.m. start.

"As of that opening, it was one of the biggest lineups I've seen," said Cherry, who also noted this year's closing of Canada's Future Shops, including the one in Niagara Falls, as a possible factor for drawing in more people. "The lineup when we opened was wrapped around the store."

Foster Festival adds familiar faces to casting

JOHN LAW
Postmedia Network

More casting has been announced for the inaugural season of the Foster Festival, and the names will be familiar to Shaw Festival audiences.

Maria McLean, Helen Taylor and Lisa Horner, who have all performed at the Niagara-on-the-Lake company in recent seasons, have been added to the cast of Halfway to the North Pole, the final show of The Foster Festival season.

The new company is devoted to the works of Canadian author Norm Foster, and promises one world premiere each season.

Foster himself will join artistic director Patrician Vanstone on stage for On a First Name Basis to open the season in June.

Niagara actors Melanie Janzen and Jamie Williams will star in the second show of the season, Here on the Flight Path, opening in July.

Halfway to the North Pole, the first season's world premiere, opens in August.

All shows will be performed at FirstOntario Performing Arts Centre in St. Catharines. Tickets are available at the box office or by phoning 1-855-515-0722.

Vanstone has also announced Meridian Credit Union as the founding sponsor for the company's first season.

■ MUSIC

Musicians team up for new PAC series

A new concert series at FirstOntario Performing Arts Centre will have local musicians sharing the stage with international artists.

The Heat! Here! Niagara Music Series kicks off Jan. 3 with house band The Mark Lalama Trio playing with Juno-winning singer/songwriter Marc Jordan and St. Catharines performer Whitney Pea.

Performing arts centre marketing manager Sara Palmieri says each show will be an eclectic mix of songs and storytelling.

"Think Levon Helm's Midnight Rambles meets Elvis Costello's Spectacle,"

The Mark Lalama Trio consists of Niagara musicians Mark Lalama, Davide D'Intenzo and Rich Moore.

Jordan, husband of Canadian singer Amy Sky, has written songs for Rod Stewart, Cher, Joe Cocker and Led Zeppelin.

The series continues Feb. 14 with Kevin Breit and Beth Moore, March 13 with Suzie Vinnick and Joe Lapinski, and April 3 with Ian Thomas and an artist to be announced.

Tickets are $35 per show, or $100 for all four. For more information, visit www.firstontariopac.ca.
